The Chief Economist's Analysis [a focus on SICABLE CI]

The operational performance of SICABLE was mixed at the end of the first half of 2018, after having reached significant levels the previous year with the completion of the Upgrade Plan (PMN), whose objective was to improve the company capacity of production. While at June 30, 2018 the turnover of the company remains practically stable (+0.2% compared to end of June 2017) by posting a value of 6 473.6 million FCFA, its net result shrinks by 6,9% and amounts to 835.4 million FCFA. According to the company, the combined effect of lower prices due to competition, the increase in raw material prices and the inclusion of the provisioned expenses explain this downward trend in the company's results. On the stock market, in 2019, the valuation of the SICABLE share increased and amounts to 1300 FCFA per share on 08 March, an increase of 31.31% compared to the beginning of the year. This uptrend in the stock price could be explained by its relatively good net yield per share (more than 7%) as well as the investments for the reinforcement of electricity production and network announced by the Ivorian Government. This trend could continue with the publication of the annual 2018 and the quarterly 2019 performance.
